Sudanse President To Visit Britain

LONDON— President Abboud of the Sudan arrives in London next week for an eight-day State Visit to Britain, will combine the formal ceremonial of the traditional state visits of the past with a more informal programe allowing the President to see a wider range of activities in contemporary Britain.

The new arrangent, it wes announced by the Lord Chamberlain's office at Buckingham Palace yesterday, Tuesday, has been designed to maintain the essential ceremonial due to a visiting head of state wihle at the same time enabling the visitor to see more of the daily life of the country.

President Abboud will arrive in London on the afternoon of May 26 and will stay at Buckingham Palace as the guest of the Queen until the next day. That evening he will be entertained by Her Majesety's Government at a dinner and reception at Lancaster House. After the Lancaster House dinner the President will leave for Scotland where he will visit Edinburgh and Glasgow.

On June 1 the President will visit industrial establishments and in the evening will be entertained by the City of London at a Guidhall banque.

On Tuesday June 2, President Abboud will give a return banquet to the Queen and on the next day he will see the Derby race at Epsom, where he will have luncheon with the Queen.

The State Visit ends on Thursday June 4 but President will remain in Britain for a private visit.

Trade Plan For Development

London ... Britain, with Australia and a number of other countries, yesterday Teusday, pressnted the United Nations Trade and Development Coufe-rence in Genena with proposals for closer economic co-operation between developing countries in order to promote trade in manufactured goods.

Kenya, Liberia, Nigeria the Philipiness Sierra Leone, Tanganyika aud Zanziber, and Uganda were among the coctries who supported the proposala. Among suggestions made are: the exchange of infarmation between developing countries on their industrial development plans; joint facilities for resarch, standardard ond trde promotion; collaboration in the development of adequate transport and communications; and the promotion among developing countries of increased yurchases of manufactured and semi-manufactured goods in othe developing countries' with simple trade and customs formalities.

Nothern Rhodesia

LONDON-Northern Rhodesia is to become independent on, October 24. It will be a Republic and be kuown as Zambia, the Secretary of State for Commonwealth Relations an the Colonies, Mr Duncan Sandys, aunouced in London yesterday. Teusday.

Speaking at the closing session of the Constitutional Conference, Mr. Sandys referred to the fact that the constitution combined important feature of the British and the American systems of government and provided for a President with strong executive powers. At the same time, the Ministers in the new Government would be Members of Parliament. Thus the Goverment, in practice would responsible to Parliament in much the same way as in Britain.

Moreover, the constition provided that if the President lost his majority in Parliament and decided to dissolve it he dissolves himself and is obliged to seek re-election.

Mr Sandys went on: There is also provis'on, as we alway insistence in this case for the maintenance of an independent judiciary and for the protection of basic human rights.
