More Oil Exploration In The West

Shell-BP has commissioned another seismic exploration party the oil search in the Western Region, where it is at work near the Ramos River, some 30 miles south-west of Warri. This brings the number of seismic parties working for Shell-BP from seven to eight - a total of over 2,000 men on exploration work alone. This is quite apart from the drilling effort and its engineering and other Services which together employ about another 3000.

The number of seismic parties working for the Company has double since oil was found at Oloibiri in 1956.

Six of the eight parties, including the new one, are operated for Shell-BP under contract by an independent firm, Seismograph Service
Limited.
