Lecture On "Gari" In London

Nigerian Expert Addresses Food Congress

LONDON Fourteen hundred food experts from over 40 countries attending the first International Congress on Food Science and Technology in London, recently heard a paper on "The Manufacture Of Gari" given by a Nigerian scientist.

He is Mr. I. A. Akinrele, M. A. (Cantab), D.I.C. of the Federal Institute of Industrial Research at Ikeja, with Mr. R. A. Holgate also of the Institute, he is representing Nigeria at the conference which is discussing how international co-operation in food science can help to feed the world's hungry.

"It is proving a most worth while and well-timed congress, particlarly in the field of shaping policies how to develop our own food resoursces, both agricultural and processing," said Mr. Akinrele.

"Some of the Indian delegates who have been developing ways of producing traditional foods in large scale food processing factories, have expressed great interest in my paper describing our own investigations into developing a mechanical system producing gari."

During the week before the congress, Mr. Akinrele visited research institutions in many parts of Britain to see some of the latest developments since his student days at Cambridge.

British Developments

"A visit to Torry research station at Aberdeen proved particuly rewarding," he commented in connection with launching a Nigerian stockfish industry. "They have begun work on trying to develop a heat dryer for fish, using the flue gases in trawlers, which is something we have been trying to do at the institute."

Mr. Akinrele explained that freezing methods would be too costly whereas heat drying at sea would provide Nigeria with a traditional dish from plentiful home resources.

"We should prefer to buy a heat dryer and adapt it, so the Torry experiments could be of the greatest help to us," he said.

Another subject of great importance to Nigeria was the production of protein from vegetables which Mr Akinrele saw at Rothamsted Research Centre in Hertfordshire.

"Now that I have seen the advanced work at Rothamsted I am more than ever convinced that out vegetation could provide enough protein for all our population," Mr. Akinrele declared.

Next week he is going back to Cambridge to study the development in the low temperature research laboratory.

British Exports Are Growing Rapidly

KEY WORD IS "BUY BRITISH" GOODS

LONDON—"Export trade in Great Britain is growing rapidly," says a London Press Representative. The growth of British exports to Western Europe, which has been a feature of Britain's trade in the last few years, has continued during recent months. Board of Trade figures issued yesterday showed that in the three months, June August export to Western Europe increased by 4 per cent. over those in March–May, including an 8 per cent increase in exports to Common Market countries.

Facts speak for the selves. This venerable veteran, a truck type Lo 2000, vintage 1934, has covered 1,367,000 miles. No doubt it would have gone on if Daimler-Benz AG had not bought it back at the ripe old age of twenty-five. Of course not every Mercedes-Benz can have such a long working life. However, all Mercedes-Benz vehicles are built to last, just as much now as they were then, to give many years and many miles of trouble-free, economical service.
